

WORKING AGAINST RACISM: EUROPEAN TRADE UNIONS AND ANTI-RACIST ORGANISATIONS PUBLIC CONFERENCE 29 JANUARY, 2004

The research project 'Racial and ethnic minorities, immigration and the role of trade unions

- in combating discrimination and xenophobia,
 - in encouraging participation and
 - in securing social inclusion and citizenship'
- will hold its first conference in Brussels. There will be simultaneous interpretation between English and French.

This project has the full support of the ETUC and of national unions in the participating countries. It is the first major international study of the representation of black, ethnic minority and migrant workers in trade unions at the workplace level in a comparative context.

The results will make a significant contribution to understanding and tackling the problems of racism and xenophobia at the workplace and will assist unions and anti-racist organisations in developing their own strategies to represent and assist these workers.

We very much welcome your participation in this conference
